Built for uphill battles

Tasman is Kia's first ute, but it's not our first rodeo.

We've been building some of the world's toughest military vehicles since 1973, so when we designed the Tasman, we put all of that experience into ensuring it was fit for purpose and ready for any challenge.

Tasman prototypes endured 18,000 rounds of stress testing on some of the world's most punishing terrain, from desert dunes in Dubai, to hill climbing in California and extreme off roading in Australia.

The Tasman passed its deep water wading trials in the same test facility where we put our military vehicles through their paces.

The integrated trailer brake control automatically applies the trailer brakes, allowing you to fine-tune the braking force at the touch of a button*.
